India is key focus for EQT growth fund

Swedish firm's new mid-market fund closed at $1.6 bn on Monday

Swedish firm EQT expects India to be "one of the largest markets" for its new mid-market growth fund, which closed at $1.6 billion on Monday.

"EQT has not set deployment targets by geography, but expects India to be one of the largest markets for the fund. The fund has made four investments to date, two of which have been in Indian companies," a spokesperson said.

The two Indian companies it invested in via its mid-market strategy are Securix and Chennai-based Indium Software. In December 2023, it said it was acquiring a majority stake in Indium, which said it would use the funds to expand into "generative AI and Advanced Analytics".

On Monday, EQT said that the Asia-focused mid-market buyout fund, which had an initial target size of $750 million, closed with $1.6 billion in total fund commitments, of which $1.4 billion will generate fees for EQT.

"Sectors of interest within mid-market segments in India would be technology, healthcare and technology, business and financial services," the EQT spokesperson said.

The Mid-Market Growth strategy—which focuses on the technology, services, and healthcare sectors across Asia, will make investments in South East Asia, Japan and Australia, in addition to India, the firm said. EQT said this strategy "is a natural extension" of its established large-cap buyout platform in Asia.

"We have been investing in Asia for the best part of three decades and now have a fully-scaled and established large-cap platform," said Jean Salata, chairman of EQT Asia and Head of the EQT Private Capital Asia advisory team. "Following this growth, we found that we no longer had a dedicated pool of capital to invest in compelling mid-market companies. With EQT Private Capital Asia Mid-Market Growth we return to our roots. We already had the track record, local expertise and global capabilities to identify the champions of tomorrow while they are still mid-sized. Now we have the capital to execute."

From piggy banks to portfolios: The case for financial literacy in schools

Saving is short-term, but investing is long-term. Investing is where the real magic happens. It's how you grow your wealth for big life goals

India has always been big on saving money. We'd spend less than we earned and save for the future. But maybe we didn't learn to invest well. Just check your forefathers' bank deposits, and you'll see.

Remember the good old days when guests handed out a shagun before they left? As kids, we'd be jumping with joy, rushing to stuff this good luck into our gullaks (piggy banks). Every now and then, we'd give the gullak a shake to feel how heavy it had become. And when it was full, kaboom! It was time for some serious shopping—remote-controlled cars or probably a cycle!

Some mothers continued the same thing as adults. They'd stash cash in secret spots—like rice containers—for emergencies! Yes, the cash came in handy when times got tough, but looking back, it didn't make us rich.

THE SAVINGS CULTURE VERSUS THE INVESTMENT HABIT
Parents often pass down the 'saving mentality' to their kids. They learn to earn and save but it usually stops there. Some parents link pocket money to chores, teaching kids the value of working for money. But they don't talk about what to do with that money, usually just circling around saving for short-term purchases, like buying toys or treats. For instance, during Diwali, we'd earn money to help with cleaning, which we'd spend on firecrackers. We got the earning part, but what about the whole investing thing? Not so much.

Teaching kids to save money at a young age is like laying the foundation for a house. It's crucial for financial stability. But if we skip teaching them about investing, we give them a solid foundation without showing them how to build the rest of the house—the walls, the roof and the rooms that make it complete.

THE IMPACT OF INVESTMENT EDUCATION
Everyone remembers Sushil Kumar, the first KBC contestant to bag the coveted ₹ 5 crore prize! But the story takes a sharp turn. Kumar found himself bankrupt in just a few years—selling milk for survival. How did this happen? Despite his newfound wealth, Kumar lacked the crucial knowledge of investing. Without a solid financial education, he squandered his fortune.

Today, kids start earning at a young age through content creation, gaming, sports, talent shows and so on. But are they equipped to handle their finances wisely? Figuring out how to save and invest money wisely can help kids grow up to be responsible adults. And this could help the whole country stay away from debt in the future and become stronger.

It is crucial therefore, that financial literacy be taught early on. As early as at the school level. This way, they can learn how to handle money smartly right from the start.

This is where platforms like StockGro step in; making investment education easy and fun through a simulated and collaborative learning experience. They also offer beginner-friendly resources that simplify investment concepts and serve as the perfect launchpad for the youth to dip their toes into risk-free investing. Such platforms drive home the message that financial literacy isn't just about budgeting; it's more about investing, risk management and the magic of compound interest.

Idle savings aren't just missing out on growth opportunities—they're leaks from the economy. They don't contribute to GDP and hinder economic growth by reducing consumption and stifling investment.

Albert Einstein once called compound interest the eighth wonder of the world, and for good reason. If you invested ₹ 1 lakh in Mutual Funds in 2024, in 10 years, it would become ₹ 5 lakh, assuming 17% annual returns. That's the power of compounding at work, making your money work for you while you sleep.

We must empower our children not only to navigate the financial puzzle but also to contribute meaningfully to national growth.

LEADING BY EXAMPLE: INTERNATIONAL MODELS OF FINANCIAL LITERACY

Countries with robust financial literacy programmes serve as global benchmarks, showcasing the positive impact of early education on economic prosperity and societal well-being. Let's explore Denmark's success story as a model for India. Denmark sets a compelling example with its mandatory financial education programme for students aged between 13 to 15, covering essential topics like budgeting, saving, banking and consumer rights. Implemented in 2015, this initiative has propelled Denmark to an impressive 71% financial literacy rate, ranking among the highest globally.

The ripple effect is that Denmark boasts a high standard of living. This is reflected in its per capita gross national product, which ranks among the highest globally. To put things into perspective, as of Danish Money Week further reinforces financial literacy by engaging 20,000 students across 700 schools annually. Through classroom visits by financial professionals, students gain first-hand insights into the importance of financial knowledge and its real-world applications.

2024, the GDP per capita of Denmark stands at $68.9 thousand. On the flip side, India's GDP per capita is only $2.73 thousand, less than half of Indonesia's $5.27 thousand. Thus, India still has a lot of ground to cover. Ambareen Musa, CEO of Yabi, the UN Task Force for Digital Finance, states in one of her articles that, "Students who received financial education in Denmark were 21% more likely to have a savings account and 32% more likely to actively manage their savings compared to their counterparts without such education." Like Denmark, India too could integrate financial literacy to foster good financial habits right from secondary school.

THE BOTTOMLINE
Financial literacy is more than just managing money—it's about empowering individuals to make informed decisions, leading to personal freedom and economic stability. When people are financially literate, they're less likely to fall into debt and more likely to contribute positively to the economy, driving sustainable growth and prosperity—the goal of StockGro's Be Financially Free (#BFF) initiative.

Unfortunately, in our pursuit of careers in medicine and engineering, financial literacy often takes a back seat. But its importance cannot be emphasised enough. By teaching financial literacy in schools, we're setting the stage for a generation of financially savvy citizens. This isn't just about preparing students for real-world financial challenges, it's also about fostering an entrepreneurial mindset and instilling global economic citizenship. Let's champion financial education in schools, envisioning a future where every graduate is academically proficient and financially empowered.
